

ERIKA BLUMENFELD—CURRICULUM VITAE

Erika Blumenfeld (b. 1971, USA) is an artist, researcher and writer who seeks engagement across the arts, sciences, and humanities to cultivate artworks and dialogue exploring the material and poetic origins of our relationship with the natural world. She approaches her work like an ecological archivist, driven by a passion to trace and collect the evidence and stories of connectedness across the cosmos. Examining entanglements between natural phenomena, ecology, geology, astronomy, and cosmochemistry, her work intends to study the notion of an embodied relationship with the cosmos—that we are, in our very chemistry, of and from the stars. Both a Guggenheim and Smithsonian Fellow, Blumenfeld’s studios include laboratories, observatories, and extreme environments, and she has collaborated with scientists and research institutions, including NASA, Scripps Institution of Oceanography, McDonald Observatory, and the South African National Antarctic Program.

In her Light Recordings series, Blumenfeld documents solar and lunar light, building her own lensless cameras to directly record the subtle incremental changes that natural light makes throughout our daily and yearly astronomical cycles. In her series, Living Light, the artist documents bioluminescent dinoflagellates, the wondrous single-celled organisms that glow in our oceans, reflecting on how phytoplankton populations are linked to our global respiratory cycle and ocean health. In her work, The Polar Project, the artist captures the natural environment of the polar regions to preserve their image for future generations and inspire awareness of the peril they face with increased climatic change. In her Wildfire series, the artist works with the blackened remains of the recent, increasing wildfires, examining the impact of shifting water patterns due to anthropogenic climate disruption alongside issues of natural resources and land ownership. In Sky Scrolls, Blumenfeld is collecting personal stories of people’s experiences under the starry night sky, intending to link the natural night as part of our cultural heritage. Blumenfeld’s ongoing project in collaboration with NASA, Astromaterials 3D, is a recently launched interactive virtual library of NASA’s Apollo Lunar and Antarctic Meteorite collections to bring a personal encounter with these space rocks and their stories of our solar system to researchers and the public worldwide. In her ongoing project Encyclopedia of Trajectories, Blumenfeld is re-enacting every meteor event that occurred over a one-year period, 5763 in total, as a single-stroke performative drawing in 24-karat gold.
